

A New Exhibit at University of San Diego

My Lai: A Massacre Took 504 Souls, and Shook the World

“The photographs were like dynamite. They horrified the nation. And the tide of public opinion began to turn against the war.”

–Seymour Hersh, Investigative Journalist

March 16 to March 28

On display in the Kroc Institute for Peace and Justice

All 19 of photographer Ronald L. Haeberle's color photographs taken during the My Lai massacre will be displayed, along with images of the heroes who intervened, and the story of how the massacre was exposed.

Sponsored by:
the Copley Library,
the History and Political Science Departments, and College of Arts and Sciences Dean Noelle Norton.

Opening Reception

March 16, 5:30 pm, Copley Library
(the 54th anniversary of the massacre)

Free shuttle runs from the West Parking Structure

Meet My Lai photographer Ronald L. Haeberle

Pre-registration is required for the reception. Email kstatler@sandiego.edu with your name and a photo of your vaccination card that includes two vaccinations and booster.

Waging Peace in Vietnam

U.S. Soldiers and Veterans who Opposed the War

WagingPeaceInVietnam.com

